

Public houses have always played an important part in the social life of Horsham. At one stage the town could boast of having one of the highest number of pubs per population in the country. However, since about 1850 when the town's population was about 6000 the number of pubs has steadily decreased from over 50 to the present-day number of 27 whilst the population has risen nearly five fold.

In addition to pubs and hotels there used to be many unlicensed beer shops, and as early as 1622 some 20 victuallers were each fined 2/- for serving short measure.

Although most farms brewed their own beer, Horsham had a variety of brewers including Gates, Michell, Satchwell, Holden, King and Barnes; the latter two having amalgamated as Horsham's only surviving brewery, which is located in the Bishopric and produces a good range of draught and bottled beers.

There are now no longer any malthouses in Horsham although several used to exist in the Worthing Road, Bishopric, Springfield Road and adjacent to the Carfax.

The existing pubs range from the small quite local to the large and bustling catering for a wide range of tastes. With a little bit of trial and error we hope you can find the type that suits yours.

The HORSHAM SOCIETY

Registered with the Civic Trust.

This Town Trail is published by the Horsham Society in the hope that it will interest our visitors and help them to enjoy their stay in Horsham. It is also offered to our fellow townfolk in the belief that it may encourage them to take a fresh look at their heritage.

Since its foundation in the early 1950s, the Horsham Society has closely monitored developments in the Town and their effect on its character and environment. By informed and constructive criticism, it has attempted to moderate the excesses of the present and future whilst protecting the best of what has been left from the past.

As a registered Charity depending on voluntary effort, the Society welcomes all offers of support. Please enquire at the local Library or Museum if you wish to know more about it. Membership is open to anyone and the subscription is modest. Meetings are held in the town and members receive frequent newsletters containing news and articles of interest.
